

Emmanuel Bailly Scholarship

General Information

The Emmanuel Bailly Scholarship is an initiative of the National Council of Canada of the Society of Saint Vincent de Paul (the “Society”). Its purpose is to reward young Vincentians for their contributions to the Society. In addition to attending school and working part time, young Vincentians find the time and energy to assist those who are less privileged in their community.

The Scholarship

Emmanuel Bailly was 40 years old when he met Frederic Ozanam. As a publisher of the Tribune Catholique, he was involved with the Société des bonne études and established a family boarding house where Ozanam stayed for a period. He was very close to the youth, helping them to combine their studies with their religious formation. Ozanam and his friends, naturally, came to him for advice regarding their plans to serve the poor. Having a great devotion to Saint Vincent de Paul, he linked the new Conference of Charity to the Vincentian spiritual family and agreed to become the first President of the Society. He remained a member of the Society almost until his death in 1861.

It is in the name of Emmanuel Bailly that the National Council of Canada wishes to recognize a young person each year for their exceptional contribution by offering a bursary of $1,000 to assist them in the pursuit of their studies.
